The daily task of assembling an outfit can be quite a feat. An activity you think should just take a few minutes generally takes 30. A pile of discarded outfits is left crumpled on the floor, and to top it off, you're late for whatever event you were planning on attending.

If it's so hard for the rest of us, how on earth do celebrities pull it off with such ease?

Well, they don't. Behind every glamorous celebrity is the knowledgeable friend/mentor known as the stylist.

While Nashville may not have the "runway" style of cities like New York, our look is more eclectic, influenced by a mixture of rock 'n' roll and loads of country music.

With a combination of cashmere leg warmers, wide-legged jeans and platform heels, four of Nashville's hottest celebrity stylists fill us in on what's hot for fall (besides the weather).

CLAUDIA FOWLER

Claudia Fowler has been styling professionally for 15 years, but she has loved fashion her entire life. From age 6 she has been creating outfits. "I have always been drawn to different mixes of all types of fashion. It's the mix that keeps it interesting," she explains.

Fowler used to own two boutiques in Louisiana, and in November she opened Haven in downtown Franklin. The store carries an inspiring variety of clothing, jewelry, home goods and special finds.

She also shops at Hud Luxe, The Perfect Pair, Jamie and Habit.

"It's another extension for being creative," Fowler says of her boutique. "I have loved meeting so many stylish people who shop with us."

Fowler's styling roster includes Miranda Lambert, as well as other musical artists. She picked a "strong and tough" look for Lambert because "Miranda is a Texas girl and loves an easy, but rougher, vintage style." The look she assembled is perfect for performing or a night on the town.

For fall, Fowler is all about cuffs, bangles, necklaces ... basically any accessory. She loves scarves, hats and rings with great detailing. Choosing interesting pieces like these makes an outfit uniquely your own. Metallics are another staple for Fowler's fall choices, because they add a bit of sparkle to outfits that "make a girl feel like a girl." She also loves mixing in menswear from time to time.
